SYSTEM GUIDANCE

The COVID-19 pandemic has changed California's budget outlook for 2020-21. While the state goes into this period with significant budget reserves, state leaders will be looking to make sensible choices to protect the long-term fiscal health of our state. The Department of Finance on Tuesday released a memo indicating the need to reassess its spending priorities to focus on core operations, often referred to as workload budgets. As we prepare for the 2020-21 May Revision, the Chancellor's Office is in continuous communication with the Governor's Office, Department of Finance and Legislative leaders. Our priority and focus is a California Community Colleges budget that invests in the fundamental needs of our students and districts. Key priorities include investments in and protection of funds for existing obligations, funding for cost-of-living adjustments (COLA), and other resources to keep pace with growing costs without compromising the quality of education as we transition to online instruction.

The Chancellor's Office is committed to providing resources to support individual community colleges and their students that are now working online only. The Chancellor's Office COVID-19 Resources page has updates, guidance and several common questions and answers for students, faculty and staff. Please encourage everyone to routinely check this page, as it will be updated daily.
