1.4: AI Corporate Partnerships

(Jory Hadsell, Executive in Residence, Strategic Technology Initiatives)

This digest item provided an update on the development and purpose of Memoranda of Understanding (MOUs) and pilot projects with various technology partners.

Discussion Summary:

- CCCI inquired about how the AI partnerships are connected to and coordinated within the broader Digital Innovation portfolio.

- CCC/CFT asked who participates in assessing projects within the Chancellor's Office Innovation Lifecycle. The Chancellor's Office clarified the engagement and Consultation groups that provide analysis and noted that findings are presented through established processes, while encouraging additional feedback from the Consultation Council.
- CCCI echoed CCC/CFT's request for clarity regarding the groups providing analysis and advocated for increased opportunities for Consultation Council input.
- CCC/CFT expressed concern that Consultation Council constituent groups are not being consulted early enough in the development of AI initiatives.
- ACHRO/EEO recommended that responses to AI include consideration of workforce impacts and job instruction implications.
- CCE/CFT inquired about how duplicative efforts are vetted and avoided. The Chancellor's Office elaborated on the coordinating role of the Digital Center.
- FACCC raised concerns related to data security and intellectual property ownership associated with AI partnerships.
- CCLC raised concerns about false enrollments, noting the Chancellor's Office's role in supporting districts and providing vetting.
- ASCCC commended the Chancellor's Office for the work completed on this digest item and the overall direction of the initiative.
- FACCC additionally raised concerns about the environmental impacts of AI, particularly related to energy consumption.
- CCCI noted that AI represents a disruptive technology with significant implications for faculty and the workforce.
- CSEA expressed concerns about AI's rapid impact on labor and the job market, noting that the pace of change is affecting curriculum development and underscoring the need for continued dialogue.
- FACCC referenced feedback from faculty leadership perspectives, citing tension between AI-driven programs and expectations for meaningful human interaction in instruction.
- The Chancellor's Office emphasized equity-driven, no-cost access to AI tools alongside continued partnerships, including collaboration with ASCCC, to support faculty professional development and respond to workforce expectations.
